

HAPPY SEA WAVES,
NOT AIRMAN,
GOT THE WINEA. P. PILOT.
Photographed yesterday.

Pilot Failed to Get Champagne
Tossed to Him From Steamship.

It was a splendidly conceived plan. That of the airplane and the three-mile limit and the wait for the steamer France and the three bottles of wine to be thrown overboard. Yes, it was a splendid plan, and A. P. Pilot, a broker and sportsman of this city who conceived it and even thought so much of it that he bet a fellow club member $100 on its success, now agrees sadly with Bobby Burns that "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley."

Thus the plan failed: When Lieut. J. B. Manners, pilot of the seaplane, trying off the Columbia Yacht Club, took aboard Mr. Pilot and Rene Joubert of the French Line a Jonah appeared.

"They will have another look than that grin on their faces when they come back, you mark my words," said an old boatman at the dock. "He was more than right. At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon the wine-searchers started out; within the hour they returned. Did they have what they had the wine? They did not."

"We sighted the France within fourteen minutes after our relayway," said Pilot to a reporter. "There on the deck I saw my friend, Harry Erskine, who is bound for France and with whom I had made the bet, some days ago, that I would meet him on the high seas and get the wine."

"He saw me and waved. High above his head he held the precious parcel. 'Throw it,' I cried. Slowly his arm swung out and overboard went the champagne."

"He had tied it to a light crate and he thought it would be a cinch to pick it up. It was not. From the time the bottles struck the water they were gone from sight. Fully half an hour we hovered about, but never did they appear."

"So, instead of singing 'There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight,' I have to fall back on the old refrain, 'How Dry I Am.'"

Mr. Pilot thinks the bottles probably broke on the slats of the crate, as the sea was rough.

GIRL SHOTS DOWN
SISTER'S SLAYER

Tragedy Stirs Kentucky, but No
Move to Arrest Young Woman
Is Made.

CORBIN, Ky., June 10.—A new bit of triangle has been uncovered at Hickholds, Whitley County, ten miles from Corbin—a girl appears as the avenger of a sister.

Floyd Ellison, twenty-two years old, for some time had been attentive to Miss Nellie Bennett, twenty, noted as a beauty in the hill country. He went to the home of Miss Bennett and other members of the family left them alone, so there is no eyewitness to what occurred. At any rate a pistol shot was heard. Members of the family, including Miss Mary Bennett, an older sister, rushed into the room. The body of the girl was lying on the floor. Ellison is alleged to have been holding a revolver. The dead girl's sister rushed upon Ellison and took his revolver, turning it on the alleged slayer. She fired only one shot.

When neighbors reached the house they found Ellison almost too weak to talk, but he claims the shooting was accidental. It is said, however, that Ellison shot Miss Bennett because she had refused to marry him. The girl who avenged her sister has not been arrested.
